

Personal Reflection Exercises...

I feel an intense flame of passion for things that interest me.

I feel an intense flame of passion for things that interest me.

I am where I want to be in my life. My passion is real and it is within me.

I surround myself with like-minded, passionate people and engage in projects and work that inspire and motivate me. I am thankful to be able to love what I do, and do what I love.

An intense fire within my heart ignites me. I know with great certainty that my passion will never escape me and can never be taken from me. My passion is deeply ingrained within me and cannot be disturbed.

At times it may be challenging to stay focused. I strive to stay on course through thick and thin, regardless of criticisms, distractions, or obstacles. I let my intense passion rise within my soul and it sends me soaring to new heights that mere words cannot explain.

I feel alive and vibrant. I am inspired and elated. I am on the highest level of stimulation. My emotions are stirred and so is my talent.

I believe everyone should engage in their passion because a passion can truly inspire and motivate in unimaginable ways. I thrive on the emotional boost I feel when I indulge in my passion and purpose.

I am doing what I was created to do. It gives me great pleasure to know that my passion is someone else's treasure. What a purpose-driven life I have!

Self-Reflection Questions:

1. What can I do to stay passionate?
2. How can I help others become passionate?
3. How will I nurture my passion to keep the flame strong?

Ryan Puroaari